Jonathan Block is a dynamic human capital executive and business leader with 20 years of experience spanning the Big 4 and the accounting profession. He specializes in leadership development, organizational transformation, and strategic communications, helping firms navigate change and build high-performing teams.

Most recently, Jonathan founded and led PwC's Trust Leadership Institute, a premier client-facing leadership development academy that engaged over 14,000 Fortune 500 business leaders. He also spearheaded Transformation and Communications for PwC's Tax practice, driving strategic initiatives that shaped the firm's future.

Before PwC, Jonathan served as Head of Transformation and Chief of Staff to the Global CHRO at Reinsurance Group of America, where he played a critical role in guiding the executive team through five acquisitions, 20 business-unit reorganizations, and CEO succession planning. His consulting career began at Accenture, where he developed deep expertise in talent strategy and organizational change as part of the Human Capital and Organizational Effectiveness practice.

An eternal optimist, Jonathan's career started in American politics. As Assistant Press Secretary to First Lady Laura Bush in the early 2000s, he helped her become the first American First Lady to write a blog and post a video to YouTube—a milestone in digital communications.

Outside of work, Jonathan is an avid outdoorsman, devoted husband, and proud (and occasionally exhausted) father of three. Whether he's competing in Spartan races or exploring nature with his family, he embraces every challenge with energy and enthusiasm.
